Further questions:

Toilets - hand dryers are still being used in both children and staff toilets in spite of the risk of spreading virus. The fan in the staffroom should have a filter or it will just circulate any virus which is now known to remain airborne longer than previously anticipated. If it does not have a filter it should not be in use. Unaware of guidance that states hand dryers cannot be used. You are drying clean hands. Air conditioning unit brings in air from outside.

What is the rule going to be with heating and having windows closed, when the weather gets colder? Good ventilation will still be important. This is covered in the SGD. You are correct that ventilation is very important, so windows etc should be open. Heating is adjustable by staff in rooms, so there will be heating on and windows open when cold. Common sense is the rule.
